

ReimerSeeds.com Electronic Catalog
Category: Kale

KL1-100 - Vates Blue Curled Kale

65 days. Brassica oleracea. Early variety produces flavorful leaves. Used fresh in salads and on sandwiches or cooked. This variety withstands colder weather. United States Department of Agriculture, NSL 67978. pk/100

KL2-100 - Red Russian Kale

KL3-100 - Premier Kale

60 days. Brassica oleracea. Early variety produces heavy crops of deep green leaves. Very flavorful. Used fresh in salads and on sandwiches or cooked. This variety stands 3 to 4 weeks longer than other varieties. Provides higher yields when seeded in the fall for spring harvest. Also known as Early Hanover Kale. pk/100

50 days. Brassica oleracea. Early variety produces flavorful red and blue-green leaves. An heirloom presumably brought to America by a Russian trader. Very winter hardy, withstands colder weather. pk/100

KL4-100 - Dwarf Siberian Improved Kale

50 days. Brassica oleracea. Plant produces very flavorful dark green kale leaves. Used fresh in salads, on sandwiches, or steamed, or use in stir fry. Suitable for Southern regions. United States Department of Agriculture, NSL 6148. pk/100

KL5-100 - Drawf Blue Curled Scotch Kale

65 days. Brassica oleracea. Early variety produces flavorful green leaves. Used fresh in salads and on sandwiches and steamed cooked. This variety better withstands colder weather than other varieties. United States Department of Agriculture, NSL 32630. pk/100

Crop Failure - Limited Supply for 2009

KL6-100 - Dwarf Essex Rape Kale

45 days. Brassica napus. The leaves of this kale are sweet tender and crunchy. Excellent when boiled steamed, used in stir fry, or as a fresh addition to salads and sandwiches. United States Department of Agriculture, NSL 80306. pk/100

KL7-100 - Siberian Curled Kale

60 days. Brassica napus. Early variety produces huge blue green curled leaves. Used fresh in salads and on sandwiches or cooked. Sow in fall or spring. Light frost improves the tenderness and flavor. A southern favorite. Known as Siberian Kale but it is actually a rape. pk/100

KL8-100 - Spring Kale

30 days. Brassica oleracea. Early and quick growing variety produces heavy crops of blue green leaves. Very flavorful. Used fresh in salads and on sandwiches or cooked. This variety usually is grown in the spring, but can be sowed in the fall. Also known as Hanover Salad Kale. pk/100

